Melancholia

Alistair Stewart

"I got stones in my pathway/And my road seems dark at night/I have pains in my heart/They have taken my appetite". Robert Johnson, known as the King of the Delta blues singers, distilled into these lines the essence of severe depressive illness – somatic ills, fear and suspicion, emotional and physical pain, nocturnal troubles and struggle against obstacles. The words are one with the powerful, haunting music. ICD-10 and DSM-IV have their place, but poets have often been there before us, and done a better job. We can all learn from Robert Johnson, born just 100 years ago.
Melancholia – 100 words
Alistair Stewart
Access the most recent version at DOI: 10.1192/bjp.199.1.48

References
This article cites 0 articles, 0 of which you can access for free at:
http://bjp.rcpsych.org/content/199/1/48#BIBL

Reprints/permissions
To obtain reprints or permission to reproduce material from this paper, please write to permissions@rcpsych.ac.uk

You can respond to this article at /letters/submit/bjprcpsych;199/1/48

Downloaded from http://bjp.rcpsych.org/ on November 4, 2016
Published by The Royal College of Psychiatrists

To subscribe to The British Journal of Psychiatry go to:
http://bjp.rcpsych.org/site/subscriptions/