Bitter Treatment

Sandy Goldbeck-Wood

it was the area between the midlines of the two temporal lobes, and back for eight to nine centimetres –
the hippocampus, the parahippocampal gyrus, the entorhinal and perirhinal cortices, the amygdala –

the young man was awake on the table the whole time, apparently as Dr Scoville inserted a silver straw and sucked out nearly the entire greyish-pink mass including his memory, like finest mate amargo through a bombilla.

This poem is from The Hippocrates Prize 2011, published by The Hippocrates Prize in association with Top Edge Press.
© Sandy Goldbeck-Wood.

Chosen by Femi Oyebode.

Bitter Treatment — poems by doctors
Sandy Goldbeck-Wood
Access the most recent version at DOI: 10.1192/bjp.bp.111.103093

References
This article cites 0 articles, 0 of which you can access for free at:
http://bjp.rcpsych.org/content/201/6/485#BIBL

Reprints/permissions
To obtain reprints or permission to reproduce material from this paper, please write to permissions@rcpsych.ac.uk

You can respond to this article at /letters/submit/bjprcpsych;201/6/485

Downloaded from http://bjp.rcpsych.org/ on November 4, 2016
Published by The Royal College of Psychiatrists