In this painting I tried to make sense of my illness. The shapes represent my personality, they disintegrate from left to right with the passage of time. The background colours stand for changes I went through, i.e. the white blast represents the death of my Dad when I was 16.

This painting is 6 foot long and if it continued, the shapes would reassemble into some kind of order. I have hope for the future.

My episodes of psychosis have occurred less often as I get older. I work as a self-employed artist which allows me to work at my own pace. It is very therapeutic. I have insight into my condition and know when to ask for help. Although I cannot prevent schizophrenia, I have learned to live with it.
Stages of Mental Illness - psychiatry in pictures
Lesley Harper
BJP 2014, 205:3.
Access the most recent version at DOI: 10.1192/bjp.bp.113.140178

References
This article cites 0 articles, 0 of which you can access for free at: http://bjp.rcpsych.org/content/205/1/3#BIBL

Reprints/permissions
To obtain reprints or permission to reproduce material from this paper, please write to permissions@rcpsych.ac.uk

You can respond to this article at /letters/submit/bjprcpsych;205/1/3

Downloaded from http://bjp.rcpsych.org/ on November 7, 2016
Published by The Royal College of Psychiatrists

To subscribe to The British Journal of Psychiatry go to: http://bjp.rcpsych.org/site/subscriptions/