Acknowledgements

We thank John Mellor-Clark and Alex Curtis Jenkins of Clinical Outcomes in Routine Evaluation Information Management Systems for collecting these data, making them available and documenting the procedures. We thank Sarah Ibel for helping to put the data into a manageable format.

References

Romantic suicide

Alexandra Pitman

The concept of ‘romantic suicide’ emerged in the 1770s following the suicide of the teenage English poet Thomas Chatterton, memorialised in Goethe’s 1774 novel in the character of young Werther. Eighteenth-century authors embellished these men as romantic outcasts, triumphing over death through fearless individualism to achieve immortality in heaven. Such myths still persist today, exemplified in journalists’ responses to the suicides of artists such as K吓, Kirchner, Rothko and Van Gogh. Glorifying their deaths by wreathing them in martyrdom is a dangerous practice. Awareness of the damage wreaked by propagation of these myths is the starting point for challenging them.
Romantic suicide – in 100 words
Alexandra Pitman
BJP 2015, 207:122.
Access the most recent version at DOI: 10.1192/bjp.bp.114.162370

References
This article cites 0 articles, 0 of which you can access for free at:
http://bjp.rcpsych.org/content/207/2/122#BIBL
Reprints/permissions
To obtain reprints or permission to reproduce material from this paper, please write to permissions@rcpsych.ac.uk
You can respond to this article at /letters/submit/bjprcpsych;207/2/122
Downloaded from http://bjp.rcpsych.org/ on October 21, 2017
Published by The Royal College of Psychiatrists